Construction Site Security

Construction sites are a vital part of any growing infrastructure and almost always require the services of a professional security agency to provide protection for the site and equipment stored there after working hours. Three major challenges facing construction sites after working hours are: break-ins, vandalism and thefts. Millions of dollars are spent every year in higher insurance costs as a result of vandalism, break-ins and theft from construction sites. Many construction sites owners must absorb the expensive cost out-of-pocket or face the cost of ever increasing insurance payments. Moreover, when property is destroyed by vandalism during non-working hours, employees reporting to work at the next shift are often unable to perform their vital duties until the items are repaired or replaced. This valuable down time is costly not only in production time by the construction company, but often time it is a personal loss to individuals that supply their personal tools and equipment to perform the job.

Construction facilities now have a valuable tool to use to fight back by using the services of a professional security guard agency, like Prince Security Services. Our security guards are sharp, alert, and capable of making good decisions in quick seconds. Security guards at Prince Security Services are:
